

DR. TASHA MAC

IDENTITY INTEGRATION SCIENTIST | AUTHOR | SPEAKER | FOUNDER

An emerging expert in identity disruption and structural stabilization, she brings a different perspective to the conversation about achievement, leadership, transformation, and human potential: What happens to the person beneath the performance?

As the creator of Identity Integration Science™, an emerging interdisciplinary body of work, she examines how disruption affects human identity and what conditions may support stabilization, integration, and sustainable performance.

Her professional background includes consulting, systems work, and leadership training, with experience spanning PricewaterhouseCoopers and U.S. federal and Department of Defense environments. She also served as an Adjunct Accounting Professor at Westwood College.

She has shared her developing work at Los Angeles Tribune Leadership Week and Jennifer K. Hill's inaugural Tribe Gathering at AWKN Ranch in Austin. Her story and perspectives have appeared in Voyage Dallas, BlackNews.com, Digital Journal, and openPR.

Through her work, she helps high functioning individuals and organizational leaders recognize what may be destabilizing performance before disruption becomes more visible

Her work is non clinical by design. There is no diagnosis and no label — because the people who need this most are the ones who will never walk into a clinical setting.
